A Photoshop plugin, or `_plug-in_`, that adds special features. So what do `_Photoshop_` and `_photography_` have to do with one another? When we take photographs, we take them as a record of life for a certain period of time. Images are basically digital snapshots. What we do with those snapshots, however, changes the original image in a way that we can actually control. When we take a photograph, we make a `_print_` of the image. The print then becomes the physical example of the image. We call this `_printing_`. Prints are one of the most important aspects of taking a photograph. They can represent the image in different sizes, and the larger the size, the more impact the image will have. It is common to print two or three `_copies_` of the image — usually on matte rather than glossy paper. This limits the amount of times you can display the image, which is why there are not a million prints of the Eiffel Tower! That is the way the process goes in the printing industry. Prints go from a lab to an office or retail store to homes. The process is basically the same whether it's a high-end photography catalog from a large manufacturer, a calendar from a small company, or a postcard from a local store. Postcards represent a different side of printing — one that is becoming more popular with the technological advances of digital cameras and printing. They are cheap to make, and they travel well. Postcards can be really simple. But they can also be elaborate and take advantage of the more advanced aspects of printing. Think of the beautiful images you can create with specialized equipment for professional photography. What is the most important aspect of a print of an image, whether it's a holiday card or a business letterhead? What does it represent about that image? It represents an image on a page — a page filled with words and pictures that we can look at when we're using that image. What is it telling us? What is it saying? It's telling us that we have an image, and it has an identity. It's telling us that the image is an important thing and that it should be treated with the utmost respect. It's telling us that it's one of many images on that page, but it's special, and that special part of it should be the focus of the reader's attention. Like most

This tutorial will show you how to use Photoshop Elements to change a portrait photo to black-and-white. In this example, we will use a portrait photo of my nephew playing soccer. The image has lots of colour and clarity that we would like to improve, and we can achieve this with Photoshop Elements without spending hours working on it. We will use the histogram for image preview, and Photoshop Elements for our editing work. In the Black & White photo filter (See the tutorial for the steps), we will learn: How to use Photoshop Elements to change a portrait photo to black and white. How to use the palette for adding a consistent black-and-white look to the photo How to use the tools to quickly change the color tones of the photo How to use the Enhance menu to improve clarity, contrast and depth of field How to use the Black & White adjustment layer to remove unwanted color How to use the Hue/Saturation adjustment layer to make shadows black How to use the Brush to paint over the photo to highlight specific areas How to use Smart Objects to make the Filter Effects and Adjustment Layers work

Step 1. Add Gradient to the Picture

1. Select the Gradient Tool. As you can see, Photoshop Elements has a limited range of tools. The reason is that most editing work can be done faster with simple tools and filters. Most of the time, you will only need the Gradient tool or one of its variations.
2. Set the background to Linear Gradient. Select the Gradient Tool.
3. Draw a linear gradient from top left to top right on the photo.
4. Adjust the angle with the handles. Select the Type Tool and select + in the "Type Options" dialog box to add the gradient to the picture. Select the Gradient Type and Angle options.
5. When finished with the preview, press Ctrl+I to apply the gradient.

Step 2. Make the Photo Grayscale

1. Double-click on the B&W photo filter button. This opens a preview window, where you can click on the Standard and Vivid tabs.
2. Select the Black & White photo filter by clicking on it with the blue dot in the top right corner of the window.
3. Choose "Standard" from the dropdown.

Q: How to search inside the MATLAB TextWindow? I have an ASCII code and I want to search inside the MATLAB window (TextWindow) for that code. I know that there is the MATLAB doc search, but I think this is for searching the whole DOC. I have tried with the built-in Find method, but it can only search for a string, so I tried to search for $\backslash r$ after the string "DATA", but this will search inside all the files, so I think it is not the way. What could I do? A: Found this one, very interesting: `function idx = search(txt, val) % index a text pattern from a string index = find(strcmp(txt, val)); if isempty(index) % no such pattern, or the string is empty idx = []; else % the match is at index(1:2) idx = [index(1:2); index(3)]; end end` It will search through the current text window and return the indices for each text match found (actually, it returns [0 0]). From this point you can get a specific line number using the line number (which is the position of index(3)), or use `idx = find(strcmp(txt, val), 0)` to search across all text lines.

Q: How does this numerator solve to $2-2\cos(\theta-\theta_2)$ I'm reading Introduction to Elementary Complex Analysis and I don't understand how they get from the first two steps. $z = -\frac{(2i\cos(\theta/2))^2 + (-\sin(\theta/2))^2}{i\sin(\theta/2)}$ Would someone please explain how they got from step 1 to 2 to 3. I really don't understand this. Thank you A: Note that $z = x + iy$ with $x = -2\cos(\theta/2)$ and $y = \sin(\theta/2)$. So $z^2 = \frac{x^2 + y^2}{y}$ $z^2 = x^2 + y^2$ $z^2 = x^2 + y^2 = 2x^2 + 2xy = 2x^2 + 2x(y + yi) = 2x^2 + 2y^2$ Therefore $z^2 = 2x^2 + 2y^2 = 2(x + iy)(x - iy)$ So $z = x - iy = -(x + iy) = -\overline{z}$ so $z = \overline{z}$.

In This Section Story Tools Perfect Imperfection Editor's Note: This is the first in a three-part series on The Perfect Color Series: the relationship between color and landscape. Join us in an exploration of color and community, from the urban to the natural. Hoping to give my color-conscious friends more to talk about, I decided to put together a post on color-expert talk-fest Styleforum. It was a great success. My loyal readers carried me through an entire day, and then some, of long, rambling posts (they complained that my writing was just too descriptive, apparently I just can't hold back). There was plenty of talk about color, the 5s, and color as art. In this article I will discuss the perfect (or ideal) color. What's the perfect color? Is it the color that's more of a symbol of a person's personality or, conversely,
